ITS REAL CHRISTMAS.

THE GENUINE ARTICLE ENJOYED IN THE HOSPITALS.

WHAT THE SEASON'S MEMENTOES DO.

It is generally believed that the spirit of Christmas is universal; that all classes and conditions in Christian lands feel the glad influence of the joyful season; but one would not expect to find much festivity in institutions for the care of the One is very apt to form the idea that perpetual gloom hangs over these places, which not even the general Christmas spirit can dispel. Such ideas are wofully incorrect. Hospitals never become places of hilarious jollity; but Christmas-day is not by any means the same as other days. The ismates are always reminded of the season whose gayety is esjoyed in a more active manner by their more fortunate friends.

Flowers, candy, pictures, and dainties to tempt the fickle appetite are sent in abundance, relieving the monotony of life in the wards, and carrying real Christmas cheer to the bed-ridden receivers.

Stories of what Christmas remembrances have accomplished when sent to some of the inmates of Richmond hospitals are almost miraculous, and are recounted by the ladies who are interested in hospital work as striking instances of the blessed effects of charity.

CURED BY A CHRISTMAS-GIFT. A lady in this city, who has for years devoted a great portion of her time to ministering to the patients in one of the hospitals can mention more than one instance in which persons whose condition was regarded as well-nigh hopeless have begun to improve from the time a Christ-man efft was received, and ultimately remas-gift was received, and ultimately recovered.

She is very fond of telling how a little boy from Pittsylvania county, sent to the hospital to have a very severe operation performed for some trouble affecting the bone of the leg was saved from death by a present sent him from home. The little fellow had come alone to the hospital his parents being too peer to be pital, his parents being too poor to be with him. He submitted bravely to the operation, which was very severe; but operation, which was very severe; but he was of weak constitution, and the attendants saw him grow weaker day by day. He himself knew he was declining, and often spoke in his childish, pathetic way of the approach of death, and of how he would like to see home and of his family and little friends and certain of his family and little friends before he died.

It was noticed that on the day before Christmas he grew exceedingly despondent, and his nurse feared that the approach of death had hestened. On Christmas morning he lay in the same listless condition, and when the good woman, who had constantly visited him, tried to cheer him by talking of the day, the little fellow turned his face to the wall, and the tears trickled down his cheeks. and the tears trickled down his cheeks His childish mind was thronged with memories of other Christmases, when he was well and strong with the people at

IT WAS BUNNY THAT DID IT. IT WAS BUNNY THAT DID IT.

But while his good visitor was still with him, trying to comfort him and rouse him from his melanchely, a nurse entered the ward, bearing a bulky package. The child did not notice her when she came in, but when she said she had a Christmas present from home for him he turned eagerly. She set the package on the edge of the cot, and removed the paper pinned around the sides, disclosing a rough wire cage, of undoubted home manufacture, inside of which was a frisky a rough wire cage, of undoubted home manufacture, inside of which was a frisky little gray squirrel. Tied to the bars of the cage was a bit of rough pasteboard, on which was scrawled:

"Dear Willie: Tommy sends you Jack,"
so you won't be lonesome."

"Dear Willie: Tommy sends you Jack, so you won't be tonesome."

With a sob that was half a cry of delight, Willie grasped the cage containing the little household pet, and they spent a jolly day together. That afternoon he was sitting up in bed playing with the squirrel; in three weeks he was sent home, and is to-day a sturdy lad, looking forward with eager anticipation to home, and is to-day a sturdy lad, looking forward with eager anticipation to the delights of Christmas.

Numerous instances, in which recovery seems to have begun with the reception of a Christmas present are related, and, services, the comparatively general knowof a Christmas present are related, and, perhaps, the comparatively general know-ledge of them causes the custom of send-ing remembrances to hospitals to be kept up. Perhaps, nowhere else are gifts more appreciated, or productive of such good

HOW THE NURSES ENJOY IT. How the Nurses Enjoy IT.

Hospital attendants, who have almost as few holidays as newspaper people, generally manage to enjoy Christmas and have at least a portion of the day off. In the institutions attached to the medical colleges the physicians are relieved of the duty of meeting their classes, which gives them a partial holiday. The nurses, the most of them young girls, divide their duties between them, so that all have a portion of the day they can devote to celebrating Christmas. Just what form their merry-making assumes cannot be stated by one who is not on the inside of the dormitories attached to the Uni-versity College or the Nurses' Home, on versity College or the Nurses' Home, on Twelfth street, where reside the girls of the training school of the Old Dominion Hospital. From the number of bulky boxes seen going into the buildings, and the sound of merry laughter and ficeing footsteps inside, the neighbors are led to believe that these young creatures who have been, or will be at some time or other, angels of mercy to many a poor unfortunate, have not had all the youth-ful spirits crushed out of them by daily contact with sickness and suffering.

If the girls do have a good time nobody will object. Let Christmas-Day be to them, to the physicians and surgeons, and to all the attaches of these instituand to all the attaches tions, as well as to the men and women and boys and girls upon whom misfortune rests so heavily, as bright as the tenderness and remembrance of friends

Mrs. Lydia Thorp announces the engagement of her granddaughter, Miss Marian Thorp, to Mr. Percy S. Read. The wedding date has not yet been fixed, but is not far distant. Miss Thorp is from New York, and until recently spent considerable time in Europe perfecting her studies. She is one of the bright lights of society here. Mr. P. S. Read is the youngest son of Mr. E. S. Read, the founder of Highland Springs, and is very popular.

Following the above announcement comes this from New York:
Dr. Granville Turner Collins and Miss Maude Smith Storer announce their marriage on Wednesday, December 15, 1897, at 10i west Ninety-second street, New York city. At home after December 30th, Highland Springs, Va.
The bride is a beautiful brunette, and is the niece of Mr. James Dudley, and the Doctor is the most popular man in the Springs. They have the good wishes of a host of friends.
The meetings of the Literary and Musi.

The meetings of the Literary and Musi cal Association for last week and this were very good. The programme included a violin and piano duet, "Martha and the a violin and piano duet, "Martha and the Daughter of the Regiment"; select reading, two scenes from "School of Scandal"; soprano solo (German), by Mrs. Bauer; piano solo, by Mr. Will Linton; select reading, "An Engineer's Reverie," by Mrs. Thorpe, and tenor solo, by Mr. James Dudley. One of the mor; attractive numbers was the sketch of the life of Madame De Stael, by Mr. William Swank. This gentleman's literary attainments are of a high order, and the association is to be congratulated on securing him as a member. The meeting next Wedciation is to be congratulated on securing him as a member. The meeting next Wednesday promises to be unusually fine. The library has been undergoing improvements, and now presents a most attractive and comfortable appearance.

SOUTHERN B. & I. ASSOCIATION. The Debtors Paying Up and the Assets Being Collected.

It is learned that the debtors of the Southern Building and Loan Association, of Knoxville, Tenn., in which many Richmond people are interested, are now paying up, and the collection of the assets by the receivers here is proceeding very satisfactorily. In only a few cases is there trouble, and that will be shortly relieved, as the court has taken action against Messrs, W. L. Folk, of Smithfield, and J. R. Miller, of Pulaski, which will probably enable the receivers to obtain the notes or money held or claimed by them.

It is the intention of counsel to press
the matters and to enforce the payment to the receivers of all moneys due or to become due since their appointment, and in cases that may arise, as above mentioned, rules and injunctions will be asked to protect debtors from interference by parties under proceedings subseto the appointment of the requent ceivers here.

It is hoped that the satisfactory effect of harmonious action in the Eastern District agreed on by the Tennessee and Virginia courts and receivers, will lead to the court of the Western District of the Mestern District of the Meste A special meeting of the Law-School Debating Society was held Thursday evening. The debate on the question, "Resolved, That the Hawatian Islands should be annexed to the United States," was decided in favor of Messrs.
